INTRODUCTION TO PDD

PDD | WHY DO WE HAVE AN ANNUAL PERFORMANCE PROCESS?

Ensuring everyone rows in the same direction and gets the support they need

Key Reasons

- Align all employees on overall company strategy, OKRs and targets
- Set clear targets and measure their achievement
- Create clarity what to focus on through feedback and feed forward for employees
- Ensure continuous improvement and competency at the right level
- Provide development & growth opportunity
- Identify key performers and how to foster their engagement
- Enable a focused, two-way conversation between superior and employee

PDD | PROCESS & TIMELINE

Superiors and employees are invited to take an active role in the process resulting in a meaningful conversation

The annual Performance & Development Dialogue (PDD) runs from December to March. Employees have the chance to set meaningful goals, identify the skills they need to develop, and take ownership of their growth journey. Both superiors and employees are invited to participate at different stages and provide input in preparation for a one-to-one conversation in March.

The 70-20-10 learning model is a framework that outlines the primary ways adults acquire knowledge and skills at the workplace.
This model is not prescriptive and the numbers are essentially a reminder that people learn most from hands-on experiences and interacting with others in the workplace (70% and 20%). It is recommended that superiors tailor the application of this model based on the employee's role and career stage, ensuring flexibility and relevance to their learning and development.
